INTRODUCTION

A gentle cycle ride with only a few ups and downs offering a pleasant mixture of open fields and woodland. Transport has played an important part in Lockerley's life. In prehistoric times it was on the Hampshire Ridgeway and much later, in about 1800, the Southampton and Salisbury Canal was excavated through Lockerley and finally in the mid 19th century, the London and South Western Railway was constructed. The canal has long gone but some traces can still be seen by those with sharp eyes, e.g. the bridge you cycle over at Lockerley Water Farm is an old canal bridge. Frenchmoor is the site of a deserted medieval village.
