HAMPSHIRE'S HISTORIC CASTLES

Hampshire has diverse range of castles, with so much history dating back from hundreds of years ago.

- Built in 1544, Hurst Castle is one of Henry VIII's fortresses, located on the spit of land from Milford-On-Sea. Hurst is typical of the King's forts, with very thick walls designed to fend off enemy fire. It is among the best preserved of Henry VIII's castles.
- Located on Calshot Spit, Calshot Castle was built using the stone from Beaulieu Abbey, this was one of many of Henry VIII's forts to defend England's coast from foreign invaders.
- The Roman fort of Portchester Castle was built 1,700 years ago and is the most impressive and best-preserved of the Roman 'Saxon Shore' forts.
- Southsea Castle was built by Henry VIII in 1544 as a fortification. It was only just finished when Henry's flagship, the Mary Rose, sank just in front of its walls. It was also a military prison and a lighthouse was constructed in the 1820s, which is still in use today.
- Wolvesey Castle or Bishops Waltham Palace is home to the bishops of Winchester and is one of the most important Norman palaces in England.
- Dating back to 1067, the Great Hall in Winchester is all that remains of the medieval castle. Henry III was born at the castle and added the Great Hall.

Royal Victoria Chapel

The Chapel was once the centre of the vast Royal Victoria Military Hospital, which served the soldiers of the commonwealth from 1863 until its demolition in 1966. The site is now a beautiful 200-acre country park overlooking Southampton Water.

Following a £3.8m Heritage Lottery Fund conservation project, the Royal Victoria Chapel has been opened to the public as a free museum and heritage centre.

- Climb the 109 steps to the top of the 150ft tower and take in the amazing 360 degree views
- Visit the Royal Victoria Chapel, which has been restored to its original beauty and houses a new exhibition that is FREE to enter
- Discover the stories of people who worked here and the patients who were treated at the former military hospital
- Explore the Royal Victoria Country Park, with its parkland, woodland and beach, ride the miniature railway and discover our brand new Fairy Garden and picnic area.
